best to retain his foothold in Mexico. The tone of the press in this capital indicates that this latter contin-ency can be relied upon, and that the will Frenchman will easily find some excuse convenient for his purpose, and refuse to withdraw his troops, notwithstanding the positive assurance already given the United States. Several of the 14th speaks most hopefully of further intervention, and the Estafette (Prench) of the same day, in discussing European affairs, says:—

In this connection, what will France do, thus freed of all European complications and in a position to dispuse of all its forces? This is a secret of the future consisted only to Napoleon III. We hope, as far as we are concerned, that the moment is not very distant when the chief of the French empire will be able to fix his eyes upon the New World and prepare for his American policy a solution worthy of his late successes in Europa."

STRATSUICAL CONSEGNATION OF INK SUMMET.

Well, the shandonment of our northern frontier to the Bornle argues against the hope of further assistance from Napoleon. In case of war with the United States is exposen the whole country to the federal arms and seed make this capital itself liable to be attacked without the enomy being first obliged to take Vera frux and Puebla. If France sees fit to go to war with the United States in support of Napoleon's American posity she will speedily pour in sufficient reinforcements to recapture the country gained by the liberais and to held it against all opposition.

They certainly are possessed of a dogged obstimacy which would weary a saint and disturb the patience of even Job himself; no manuter of hard knocks can move them, and they become insensible to kindness when once they get set on their trying, mulish way. This characteristic, the leaders hope, will do more than their bullets to keep off imperial troops and drive away Maximilian after the French army shall have left.

The mint in city has commenced the coinage of $20 gold pieces. The Emperor is striving to introduce the decimal currency among the sevents and the new coin is all of currency among the sevents and the new coin is all of currency among the sevents and the new coin is all of currency. The new imperial dollar is becoming onto pieculial, and considerable quantities must be activated best of Maximitian, and upon the reverse the imperial arms. The Emperor experiences much opposition in his efforts to improve the currency, the country people, especially, aftering to the old system of reais, or shillings.

A local chief named Josquin Martinez raised about two headred and fity men, and forthwith commonced levying contributions upon the inhabitants of the Sierra, new Zacuatipan. His success was so great that he increased his force to seven or eight leunded men, with which he sought a larger field of operations. Sending a pertition of his force to stated Zacuatilpan, the Joseph and the place became alarmed, and, believing that they were to be attacked by between four and five thousand men, distribuyed their fortifications, and precipitately field. This increased Martinez's presting, and he was soon joined by a large number of Indians, some six hundred of whom were armed. With this force he is overranning the Sierra, and threatening the country from one on of the department to the other. The cities of Toloca and Pactuca are in danger and reported to be besieged. The garries have been strengthened, which leaves the intention to operate against Tampice and possibly Matamoras. EDT IS CAMPROIS, XUCATAN.

On the 4th of August a revolt occurred in Campache, Yucatan, led by Memo on the square of Santa Anna, which was soon suppressed. But the operations which were then being undertaken against the Indians proved a complete failure in consequence; at the very first encounter, the Indians had the advantage. The Imperial commissary, in view of the periods situation of all the pentisular towns threatened by the Indians, has ordered that all Mexican from the are of eighteen to fifty years shall enlist to form a corps which will be named 'Guardia de Seguridad.' Unleas, however, reinforcements arrived speedly the town of Thursdow was in imminent danger, as the Indians opposed the government troops everywhere, in consequence of their small force. According to the Ere Nouselle, of Mexico, some burnt remains of an ancient vessel have been found near Vera Cruz by excavators who are engaged in building an aqueduct near that city. Some circumstances lead to the belief that they are remains of one of Fernanco Coriex vessels. The proper authorities lave taken the matter in hand, and will investigate this subject so full of historical interest.
